Success and Setback: Lessons from Two Veterinary Cases

By Leslie Gordon, Senior Manager, Living Collections, Natural History Museum of LA County

Justine McGarry, Supervisor, Living Collections, Natural History Museum of LA

We share two veterinary cases with contrasting outcomes: a kingsnake that experienced a remarkable recovery from a cutaneous manifestation of vascular disease, and a tortoise whose intestinal obstruction did not resolve despite intervention and ultimately resulted in mortality. Together, these cases highlight both the potential for recovery and the challenges associated with determining appropriate intervention.